

Arteries of the city

As Hong Kong becomes ever more affluent, the number of people with cars continues to increase. The Transport Department has released its Annual Traffic Census that records the number of vehicles on each of the city's roads. The Post has analysed the data and mapped out traffic levels to show how the network keeps us all moving.

SCMP graphics: Simon Scarr

Source: Transport Department Annual Traffic Census 2011 (census covers 87.1% of Hong Kong's roads)